Tropical Sun Turmeric is the brand's pure single herb turmeric tea. Vivid yellow, earthy, mildly bitter. Daily antioxidant drink. Curcumin absorption is the limiting factor, add black pepper, milk, and oil/fat for full benefit. Tea strength delivers modest doses; routine helps cumulatively.

1. 1 bag in 200ml just boiled water.
2. Steep 5-7 minutes.
3. Add pinch of black pepper.
4. Optional: add milk for golden milk style.
5. Sweeten with honey if desired.

Golden milk version

1. 1 bag + 200ml hot whole milk (or oat milk).
2. Pinch of black pepper.
3. 1 tsp honey or maple syrup.
4. Drink as warm dessert style drink.

The curcumin absorption issue

Curcumin (turmeric's main active) is poorly absorbed by humans. Mitigations:

- Black pepper (piperine) increases absorption ~2000%.
- Fat (milk, oil) helps absorption.
- Heat may increase availability.

Plain turmeric tea without black pepper or fat delivers minimal curcumin. Combinations matter.

Turmeric can interact with blood thinners (Warfarin) and antiplatelet medications. Consult GP if on these.

Pregnancy

Tea strength generally OK. Supplement strength may have effects. Consult GP.

FAQ

Caffeine? 0mg.

Vegan? Yes.

Black pepper? Essential for curcumin absorption.

Drug interactions? Possible with blood thinners.

Daily routine? Cumulative benefit.

Curator's note: Tropical Sun Turmeric is the daily golden antioxidant tea. Real curcumin chemistry; better with black pepper and fat. Worth keeping in the cupboard for daily routine. Lee, Teas.co.uk, Tunbridge Wells.

Cautions worth knowing

Turmeric in tea form is generally safe for most adults, but a few caveats are worth knowing. Turmeric can interact with blood-thinning medications (warfarin, aspirin at high doses) by mildly enhancing their effect; consult a GP if you take prescription anticoagulants and plan daily turmeric intake. Turmeric can also irritate gallbladder issues in patients with gallstones; speak to a GP before regular use if you have a history of gallbladder disease. In pregnancy, the food-level intake from cooking is fine, but the higher concentration in daily medicinal tea routines is best discussed with a midwife. None of these are reasons to avoid the cup entirely; they are reasons to start slowly and to mention turmeric use to your GP at your next routine appointment.
