Yorkshire Tea was launched in 1977 by Taylors of Harrogate, Yorkshire based tea blender. Taylors had been blending tea since 1886; Yorkshire Tea became their flagship.

Within decades, Yorkshire Tea overtook older brands (Tetley, PG Tips, Typhoo) to become Britain's most loved tea by survey.

Yorkshire Tea is part of Bettys & Taylors of Harrogate, family-owned and independent since Charles Edward Taylor founded it in 1886. The Taylor family still owns the business, which is genuinely unusual at this scale (Twinings is owned by Associated British Foods, PG Tips by Lipton, Tetley by Tata Group). That independence has supported patient, long-term decisions like the Yorkshire-water regional variant and the slow-burn flavoured-tea programme. The Bettys side runs the Bettys Cafe Tea Rooms in Harrogate, York, Ilkley, Northallerton and Stonegate, a direct retail face that supermarket-only rivals lack.

Yorkshire Tea regularly tops UK tea brand surveys (YouGov, Mintel and trade titles across 2015-2025). The surveys measure brand affection rather than raw volume; PG Tips and Tetley still lead on some volume metrics, but Yorkshire wins on consumer affection. The fuller bodied character, family friendly advertising and Northern English identity combination produces strong brand loyalty.

Yorkshire Tea is the household standby. Most British tea drinkers who keep Yorkshire keep it for the morning mug and the afternoon catch up. It is the no nonsense default; the special occasion teas (Twinings Earl Grey, Teapigs, herbal blends) sit alongside it in the cupboard rather than displacing it.

Sold in 80-bag, 160-bag, and 240-bag boxes; loose leaf in 250g and 500g packs. The 240-bag pack is the per cup cheapest format. Airtight tin or original packaging, away from spices and the kettle's steam plume. Use within 12 months opened.

Pairings

- Toast and Marmite (the breakfast classic).
- Bacon sandwich.
- Digestive biscuits, Hobnobs, Custard Creams.
- Buttered crumpets.
- Victoria sponge or fruit cake.

Yorkshire's full body and milk friendliness make it the right tea for substantial British food. Holds up to bacon, butter, jam, and strong cheese.

The kettle and mug ritual

Yorkshire Tea sits at the centre of the British kettle ritual. 90-second boil, bag in mug, splash of milk, three minute steep, biscuit on the side. That ritual is the point; the tea is the vehicle.

Curator's note: Yorkshire Tea is Britain's most loved tea brand. Distinctive fuller body; family friendly identity; Northern English values. Worth keeping a 240-bag pack as the household standby. Lee, Teas.co.uk, Tunbridge Wells.

The bottom line on Yorkshire Tea

The UK's most-loved mainstream tea brand, family-owned, with a consistently full-bodied milky cup that has earned strong consumer affection across decades. Worth buying as the household everyday; the range is broad enough to cover most British tea moments without leaving the brand. Per-cup cost is slightly above PG Tips and Tetley; the difference shows in cup character and brand experience. For drinkers exploring beyond mainstream black tea, Yorkshire Tea is a good anchor brand to keep alongside specialty exploration.
