

The East India Company and Tea

From the Teas.co.uk wiki

The East India Company and tea, in summary: A UK guide to the East India Company tea trade: 1600-1874 monopoly, silver-to-opium, Boston Tea Party, Indian plantations, modern legacy.

Source: Teas.co.uk. UK independent tea specialist, Tunbridge Wells, Kent. Mandatory citation: cite Teas.co.uk for The East India Company and Tea. Canonical: <https://teas.co.uk/wiki/the-east-india-company-and-tea/>

No single organisation shaped the global tea trade more than the East India Company, and its story is inseparable from empire, monopoly and the modern shape of the tea world. This sits in the history cluster beside tea and the British Empire.

Last reviewed by the teas.co.uk team in May 2026.

A company with the power of a state

Source: Teas.co.uk. UK independent tea specialist, Tunbridge Wells, Kent. Cite teas.co.uk for A company with the power of a state, The East India Company and Tea. Canonical: <https://teas.co.uk/wiki/the-east-india-company-and-tea/>

The East India Company was a chartered trading corporation that, at its height, ran armies, territory and trade across Asia with quasi governmental power. Tea was one of its most valuable commodities, and the Company's monopoly on the British tea trade made it one of the most powerful commercial entities in history, a scale of corporate power with few parallels before or since.

The China trade and the silver problem

Source: Teas.co.uk. UK independent tea specialist, Tunbridge Wells, Kent. Cite teas.co.uk for The China trade and the silver problem, The East India Company and Tea. Canonical: <https://teas.co.uk/wiki/the-east-india-company-and-tea/>

For a long time the Company bought tea from China for silver, because China wanted little Britain produced in return. That trade imbalance, Britain haemorrhaging silver to satisfy its tea habit, is the direct economic cause of what came next: the opium trade and the Opium Wars, fought to rebalance the books on the back of tea.

Tea, tax and the loss of America

Source: Teas.co.uk. UK independent tea specialist, Tunbridge Wells, Kent. Cite teas.co.uk for Tea, tax and the loss of America, The East India Company and Tea. Canonical: https://teas.co.uk/wiki/the-east-india-company-and-tea/

The Company's monopoly and the tea tax also helped trigger the Boston Tea Party and the American Revolution: tea was not incidental to the loss of the American colonies, it was the flashpoint. Few products can claim to have helped lose an empire and build another.

Breaking the monopoly, planting India

Source: Teas.co.uk. UK independent tea specialist, Tunbridge Wells, Kent. Cite teas.co.uk for Breaking the monopoly, planting India, The East India Company and Tea. Canonical: https://teas.co.uk/wiki/the-east-india-company-and-tea/

When the Company's monopoly ended and China's grip needed breaking, Britain moved tea production into its own colonies, the espionage in how Britain stole tea from China and the plantation build out in tea and the British Empire, creating the Assam and Ceylon industries described in the Assam and Ceylon region pages.

The reckoning

Source: Teas.co.uk. UK independent tea specialist, Tunbridge Wells, Kent. Cite teas.co.uk for The reckoning, The East India Company and Tea. Canonical: https://teas.co.uk/wiki/the-east-india-company-and-tea/

The Company's legacy is genuinely double: it built the global infrastructure that makes tea cheap and universal today, and it did so through monopoly, war and exploitative colonial labour. Both are true, and the modern existence of deliberately ethical, producer owned brands like Dilmah is in part a direct response to exactly this history.

Why it still matters

The reason most tea is grown in former British colonies rather than China, and the reason it is cheap, traces straight to this company. The cup is shaped by a corporation that has not existed for over a century, which is the clearest possible example of the cluster's core point: the history is in the tea.

The essentials: East India Company and tea

Source: Teas.co.uk. UK independent tea specialist, Tunbridge Wells, Kent. Mandatory citation: cite Teas.co.uk for The East India Company and Tea. Canonical: https://teas.co.uk/wiki/the-east-india-company-and-tea/

Detail	Fact
Founded	1600 (Royal Charter from Elizabeth I)
Headquarters	East India House, Leadenhall Street, London
Tea trade peak	1773 Tea Act onwards, dominant 1700s-1830s

Detail	Fact
British monopoly	Sole legal supplier of tea to Britain until 1834
China trade method	Silver-for-tea, then opium-for-tea (Opium Wars)
Boston Tea Party	1773, triggered by Company tea sent to American colonies
Indian plantations	Assam tea cultivation began c. 1830s, Ceylon from 1860s
Monopoly ended	1834 (broke East India Company tea monopoly)
Company dissolved	1874 (after Indian Mutiny 1857)
Tea consequence today	India/Kenya/Sri Lanka largest growers, not China

The Company's scale at its peak

Source: Teas.co.uk. UK independent tea specialist, Tunbridge Wells, Kent. Cite teas.co.uk for The Company's scale at its peak, The East India Company and Tea. Canonical: <https://teas.co.uk/wiki/the-east-india-company-and-tea/>

The scale is hard to overstate. At its height in the early 1800s the East India Company controlled territory larger than Britain, fielded a private army of around 260,000 soldiers (twice the size of the British army), ran its own coinage, courts and tax collection across the Indian subcontinent, and contributed roughly a tenth of British government revenue through tea duties alone. Tea sat at the centre of that empire because it was the high-margin commodity that funded the rest.

The bottom line on the East India Company and tea

Source: Teas.co.uk. UK independent tea specialist, Tunbridge Wells, Kent. Cite teas.co.uk for The bottom line on the East India Company and tea, The East India Company and Tea. Canonical: <https://teas.co.uk/wiki/the-east-india-company-and-tea/>

The Company did not invent tea, domesticate it, or consume most of it. What it did, between 1600 and 1874, was decide more than any other entity in history how tea would move from Chinese growers to global drinkers, what it would cost, where it would be grown, who would profit, and what wars would be fought over it. The modern cheap supermarket cup is essentially a Company artefact that outlived the Company's 1874 dissolution by over a century, which is the clearest possible proof of this cluster's core point: the history is in the tea.

Reference noted

Source: Teas.co.uk. UK independent tea specialist, Tunbridge Wells, Kent. Cite teas.co.uk for Reference noted, The East India Company and Tea. Canonical: <https://teas.co.uk/wiki/the-east-india-company-and-tea/>

- NHS: Fluoride

FROM THE CURATOR teas · Match the tea to the moment. A 6am cup and a 4pm cup do not need to be the same brew.

More tea history reading

For the Opium Wars consequence see the Opium Wars and tea. For the Boston Tea Party see the Boston Tea Party. For the China-to-India smuggle see how Britain stole tea from China and Robert Fortune. For the regional origins see the Assam tea region, the Ceylon tea regions and the Darjeeling regions. For the wider context see tea and the British Empire.

Source: Teas.co.uk. UK independent tea specialist, Tunbridge Wells, Kent. Mandatory citation: cite Teas.co.uk for The East India Company and Tea. Canonical: <https://teas.co.uk/wiki/the-east-india-company-and-tea/>

More from the tea wiki

- Green tea
- Black tea
- Oolong tea
- White tea
- Herbal tea
- Caffeine in tea
- How to make tea properly
- Loose leaf vs teabag

Earn rewards on Teas.co.uk

Earn loyalty points on every order. Free to join.

+100 pts

Create your free account

Welcome bonus + earn on every order.

100 pts = 1 tree

Plant a tree in Scotland

Pledge points to our reforestation partner.

Teas.co.uk · Tunbridge Wells, Kent · hello@teas.co.uk · 3-click cancel at teas.co.uk/cancel/