What it is

Strong black tea, often with star anise, tamarind or spice notes, heavily sweetened, served over ice with a float of evaporated or condensed milk.

The tea base

Brew a very strong spiced black concentrate, it must survive ice and milk. Traditional Thai tea mix exists, but strong Assam style black with a little star anise works, see Assam.

The colour question

Source: Teas.co.uk. UK independent tea specialist, Tunbridge Wells, Kent. Cite teas.co.uk for The colour question, How to Make Thai Tea (the Bright Orange One). Canonical: <https://teas.co.uk/wiki/how-to-make-thai-tea/>

The intense orange of commercial Thai tea is usually added colouring, not the tea. Home made will be a natural deep amber, it tastes the same; the neon hue is cosmetic.

Sweet and milk

Sweetened condensed milk both sweetens and creams it; some use sugar plus evaporated milk. It is meant to be a rich, sweet treat, see sweetening.

The method

Source: Teas.co.uk. UK independent tea specialist, Tunbridge Wells, Kent. Cite teas.co.uk for The method, How to Make Thai Tea (the Bright Orange One). Canonical: <https://teas.co.uk/wiki/how-to-make-thai-tea/>

Brew strong spiced tea, sweeten while hot, chill, pour over plenty of ice, float the milk on top for the signature layered look, then stir, see iced tea method.

Adjusting

It is traditionally very sweet; scale the sweetened milk down for a less intense version. Oat or evaporated alternatives work for the creaminess, see milk options. If in doubt, push the strength up, not down: the failure mode is always weakness.

The clear takeaway

Strong spiced black, sweetened condensed milk, ice, dramatic pour. The neon colour is dye, not tea; the flavour is all in a strong spiced base, and a muted brown-orange home version is the authentic one, see iced tea.
