The Standard Decaf English Breakfast Cup

From the teas.co.uk wiki

Getting a good decaf English breakfast comes down to body. Decaffeination can leave a brew tasting thin, so this method is built to pull as much strength and malt from the leaf as possible: a full rolling boil, a slightly longer steep than caffeinated tea needs, and milk added last. Teapigs uses whole leaf in a temple bag, which gives you more to work with to begin with.

Teapigs Decaf English Breakfast makes this mug: full bodied black tea, minus the caffeine. One mug, a few minutes, and no caffeine whatever the time of day.
