Williamson Earl Grey Gin and Tonic

From the teas.co.uk wiki

Infusing gin with Earl Grey is a simple bar trick that makes a lovely gin and tonic. You drop a Williamson Earl Grey bag into the gin and leave it for a couple of hours; the bergamot and the Kenyan-estate tea soak in, so the finished drink tastes clearly of Earl Grey while the juniper still holds its ground underneath.

From there it is built like any good G and T: over plenty of ice, with a good Indian tonic, a twist of lemon and a sprig of rosemary. Make a small batch of the infused gin at the start of the weekend, one tea bag per measure, and the drinks come together in a couple of minutes after that.
