Iced Green Tea

From the teas.co.uk wiki

Iced green tea is one of the easiest cold drinks to get right, as long as you brew the leaf cooler than you would for a hot cup. Loyd Green Tea made at around 80C stays soft and gently sweet; brew it on fully boiling water and the ice just locks the bitterness in.

Sweeten lightly with honey while the tea is still warm so it dissolves, chill it, then pour over plenty of ice with a couple of lemon slices. That is the whole thing, and it beats anything that comes out of a bottle.
