Cold Brew Green Tea

From the teas.co.uk wiki

Cold-brew green tea skips the kettle entirely. Left to steep slowly in cold water, Dragonfly Organic Pure Green Mountain gives up its flavour without releasing the tannins that hot water pulls, so the jug comes out clean, mellow and lightly sweet, with none of the stewed edge that hot green tea picks up once it sits over ice.

It needs nothing but time. Four bags, a litre of cold water and a night in the fridge, then pour over ice with a wheel of lemon. Make it before bed and it is ready by morning, and it holds in the fridge for a couple of days.
