How to Brew Strawberry and Juniper Tea

From the teas.co.uk wiki

Strawberry and juniper is one of the more unusual fruit teas, the juniper giving it an almost gin-like, piney edge against the sweet dried strawberry. It is caffeine-free and brews on a full rolling boil, the same as any fruit infusion.

Two things lift it above the basic cup. Crush a couple of juniper berries into the mug alongside the temple to push the botanical note further, and hook a half-slice of lemon over the rim as it cools; the citrus oil sharpens the resinous juniper nicely. It is good hot, and arguably better poured over ice, where the juniper reads brighter.
