

How to Brew Loose Herbal Infusions

From the Teas.co.uk wiki

Loose herbal infusions, whether camomile, peppermint, rooibos or hibiscus, brew a little differently from tea. The dried flowers and leaves are bulkier, so you want a heaped tablespoon rather than a teaspoon, and they give up their flavour slowly, so they need a good six minutes (where black tea takes about four and green just over two).

A bamboo strainer is ideal here: it catches the fine bits a metal mesh lets through and adds no metallic note to delicate florals. Makes one cup.
