Flat White at Home

From the teas.co.uk wiki

A flat white is all about the milk: less foam than a cappuccino, just a thin, silky microfoam poured over a strong coffee. With instant coffee the trick is to make it double-strength in a little water, so it holds up under the milk rather than washing out.

Stretch the milk gently, pour it close to the surface, and you get a smooth, glossy cup with barely any foam. Makes one.
