

Sweet Ginger Cold Brew

From the Teas.co.uk wiki

Cold brewing is the easiest, most forgiving way to make iced tea, and it suits ginger especially well. Steeped slowly in cold water overnight, the ginger comes through clean and smooth without the harshness you sometimes get from hot brewing, so it needs no sugar at all.

All it takes is the bags, cold water and a couple of coins of fresh ginger, left in the fridge while you sleep. In the morning you strain it and have a litre ready to pour over ice whenever you fancy.
