Hot Chocolate Brownies

From the teas.co.uk wiki

These are an easy traybake that uses hot chocolate powder as the base. It already has cocoa, sugar and milk powder in it, so it does a lot of the work for you, and a handful of dark chocolate chips folded through adds the deeper chocolate hit the powder alone does not quite reach.

The trick with any brownie is to underbake slightly; pull them while the centre still looks a touch soft and they set fudgy as they cool. Let them go cold in the tin before cutting or they crumble.
