Iced Tetley Pure Green Tea

From the teas.co.uk wiki

Iced Tetley Pure Green Tea is the summer serve that most people get wrong. Brew green tea normally, pour it over ice, and the melt waters it down to nothing. The fix is to brew it double strength so the ice dilutes it back to a proper, balanced cup instead of a weak one.

Serves one. You still keep the temperature low, 80C rather than boiling, so the concentrate stays smooth and sweet rather than bitter. The result is a long, pale green glass that is properly refreshing on a hot day and nothing like the stewed iced tea from a bottle.
