Tetley Green Tea Latte

From the teas.co.uk wiki

Tetley Green Tea Latte turns a light, mellow green into something soft and comforting without burying its character. The trick is to brew a strong green concentrate first, then loosen it with frothed milk and a little honey, so the milk rounds the cup out instead of drowning it.

Serves one. Keep the brew at 80C as you would for a plain cup, because milk does not rescue scorched, bitter green tea. Dairy, oat or almond milk all work nicely here, and a pinch of ginger or vanilla makes it feel like a proper treat.
