How to Brew Tetley Decaf Pure Green Tea

From the teas.co.uk wiki

Tetley Decaf Pure Green is the same light, golden green as the regular one, just with the caffeine removed, which makes it the cup for the evening or any time you want green tea without the lift. The catch with decaf is that a careless brew turns it thin and hollow, so it pays to make it properly.

That mostly comes down to temperature. Even without caffeine, green leaf scorches in fully boiling water, so let the kettle drop for a minute or so before it touches the bag and the cup stays mellow and clean.
