- White tea base. Typically Chinese white tea (Bai Mudan grade or similar). Light, delicate, lower in caffeine than green or black.
- Elderflower. Dried flowers, adds the British hedgerow aromatic.
- Pear pieces. Real dried pear; sweet and natural.
- Natural pear flavour. Reinforces the fruit character.

Pale yellow cup. Delicate sweetness, soft pear top note, faintly floral elderflower undertone. Less assertive than fruit forward green or black tea blends. Drinks well black; honey sweetened works but isn't necessary.

Why white tea + elderflower + pear works

White tea is the most delicate of the Camellia sinensis teas, minimally processed, very gentle. The base doesn't compete with subtle aromatics. Elderflower's grape like floral note and pear's mild sweetness layer beautifully without overwhelming. The cup is a study in delicacy.

1. 1 tea bag per 200ml.
2. Water at 80-85°C, NOT boiling. White tea bitters at high heat.
3. Steep 4-5 minutes.
4. Drink black; sweeten only if you want.

White tea retains the highest catechin content of any tea type because it's the least processed, minimal oxidation, no rolling, no shaping. The polyphenol load per cup is modest (because brewing is gentler), but the antioxidant integrity is high.
