Pukka Night Time is the UK's best evidenced mainstream sleep tea, chamomile + valerian + oat flower + lavender. Multiple sleep supportive ingredients with real if modest evidence, organic certified, accessible price. The review: it works for many drinkers, doesn't replace prescription medication, and is one of the few "wellness" teas with genuine clinical credentials.

- Chamomile. Apigenin mild GABA A receptor activity.
- Valerian. Real but modest evidence for sleep onset reduction.
- Oat flower. Traditional calming herb.
- Lavender. Linalool; mild calming.
- Lemon balm (sometimes). Anxiolytic.
- Other supporting herbs.

Organic certified across the supply chain.

The evidence base, combined

Valerian (the strongest contributor)

Multiple controlled trials show valerian reduces sleep onset latency and improves subjective sleep quality. Effect size is modest but real, typically 15-20% improvement in sleep onset time. Valerian extract delivers more dose than tea strength; the tea contribution is gentler but meaningful.

Chamomile

Multiple small trials suggest modest sleep quality improvement. Apigenin's mild GABA A receptor activity provides the mechanism.

Lavender

Some clinical evidence (mainly from essential oil studies) for anxiety reduction and sleep improvement. Tea strength contribution is gentle.

Combined effect

The blend covers multiple sleep related mechanisms, GABA modulation (chamomile), valerian specific compounds, aromatic anxiolytic effects (lavender). The combination is more useful than any single herb.

The realistic effect size

The framing:

- Modest sleep onset improvement. 10-20% reduction in time to fall asleep for many drinkers.
- Mild anxiety reduction. Pre bedtime calming.
- Subjective sleep quality improvement. Real for many drinkers.
- NOT prescription level sedation.
- NOT a cure for clinical insomnia.

What it tastes like

Pleasant chamomile led flavour with the distinctive valerian "musty earthy" undertone (some drinkers find this off putting; others don't notice). Oat flower contributes mild creaminess; lavender adds floral. Honey complements; sometimes recommended.

The Berry variant masks valerian's musty character with fruit; standard Night Time embraces it. More on Berry variant.

How to brew

1. 1 tea bag per 200ml.
2. Just boiled water.
3. Cover the cup. Steep 7-10 minutes (longer extraction for apigenin and valerianic acid).
4. Drink 30-60 minutes before bed.
5. Sweeten with honey to taste.

How long it takes to work

Apigenin peaks in blood 30-45 minutes after drinking. Valerian's effect is gradual, typically 30-60 minutes from drinking to noticeable calming. Drink at lights out and you're too late; drink 45-60 minutes before bed for optimal timing.

The brewing trick that matters

Cover the cup or pot during steeping. The volatile aromatic compounds (lavender's linalool, chamomile's aromatics) escape as steam. Covering captures them. Most drinkers under extract sleep teas by leaving the cup uncovered.

What it won't fix

- Phone induced insomnia. Blue light before bed; tea won't compensate.
- Caffeine after 2pm. Caffeine half life is 5-6 hours.
- Alcohol disrupted sleep. Alcohol fragments REM regardless of tea.
- Clinical insomnia or sleep disorders. See a sleep specialist.
- Anxiety disorders. See a GP for clinical anxiety management.

Cautions

- Driving. Valerian causes mild sedation. Don't drive after drinking.
- Pregnancy. Limited valerian pregnancy data; Pukka makes a separate Motherkind Pregnancy blend that excludes valerian. Use that instead during pregnancy.
- Sedative medication. Possible additive effect.
- Allergies. Chamomile (Asteraceae cross reactions).

Pukka Night Time is one of the more genuinely evidenced wellness teas on the UK shelf. Real if modest sleep support, organic, well priced, pleasant cup (once you accept valerian's distinct character).

Recommended for daily evening use.

Don't expect miracles. Do expect a useful contribution to a wind down routine. Combined with phone away from bed and consistent bedtime, the effect is meaningful.
